DON'T LET ANXIETY RUIN YOUR SEX LIFE

SYDORAL treated up a patient I'll call Peter P. came to me for his regular physical checkup. As we started before the examination, Peter told me sadly that he thought his marriage was about to break up.

I was greatly surprised when Peter who, in twenty words, had married a charming and intelligent girl seven years ago, and I had always thought their marriage was a successful one that I had been greatly mistaken.

We don't get along sexually. One day Peter told me I was wonderful for the last year, but since then I haven't been able to satisfy her. Many nights I just don't feel any desire at all. It's ruining our marriage. Doctor and I don't understand it!

Doctor did it all for me. But to help the condition and our conversation provided, I began to understand the cause of Peter's trouble.

He was suffering from extreme fatigue brought on by the pressure of business. Peter holds a fairly responsible job in a large corporation, and not long after his marriage he was given a substantial raise and a promotion. I discovered that in the last six months his blood pressure had risen sharply, he had lost nearly ten pounds and his muscles had been extremely sore.

I asked him whether he had any reason for unusual worry. He said:

Well I suppose my job keeps me pretty busy. Doctor, I've got a lot on my mind now when I have a worry about and there are a couple of problems and pressing for my job. I never make a bad mistake. Besides, I know that in my position I try to keep moving on. It's very where I am in the company. It's so bad as being depressed.

I EXPLAINED to Peter that he was suffering from hypochondria brought on by anxiety. Spending long hours thinking about his job was keeping him all day and at night. And furthermore he was caught in a particularly vicious kind of trap.

The state of anxiety he was in was seriously affecting his sexual performance. His body had become too tense from worry and fatigue and therefore he was physically incapable of the sexual act. Then he had been when he was a married man. Your sex powers are directly related to your mental well-being. Peter's health had declined and with that decline had come a sharp drop in his sexual abilities.

But to complicate matters, the loss of virility was causing him to worry even further. This time about his marriage—worry, anxiety, and yet another loss of virility! It was a vicious circle. Worry about sex job brought about loss of sexual virility and worrying about that brought about a further loss of virility!

Peter was worried and depressed when I explained these things to him. But the situation was far from hopeless. As a start, I called on Peter's wife and discussed the matter with her, showing her her husband's condition and stress symptoms, and as much to reduce her husband's state of tension. He immediately agreed to do all the work to help him.

Next I prescribed a tranquillizing drug for Peter to take temporarily. Tranquillizers must not be used as a permanent source of relief from stress, but they are extremely valuable in short-term elimination of anxiety. After a week on the happy pill Peter had made tremendous strides toward his body off balance due to long and nervous work of the mind. I think I shall let him that the rest was up to him. He would have to develop habits of relaxation and to relax before the mind would be able to relax. He would ultimately carry him in no very long.

PETER'S case is not at all unusual. Among young men in today's complicated and confusing world, a man in his twenties is faced with an immense number of decisions which will shape his future life. Problems of education, military service, marriage, employment, and business begin to arise almost constantly. Our times have truly been called "The Age of Anxiety."

We wonder that many of our young men are troubled by tension and fatigue. But few of them are aware of the direct influence that state of fatigue has on their sexual virility. A worry-wart may easily find himself

This Practical Self-Study Course will give you

A COMPLETE MASTERY OF MATHEMATICS EASILY, QUICKLY

Learn Mathematics...get a BETTER JOB!

Now you, too, can learn mathematics and get the basic training for a better job... the kind of training that is quickly recognized today and gladly paid for.

In today's fast-moving scientific age, there are countless wonderful opportunities for men who know mathematics: superintendents and foremen, technicians and laboratory workers, designers, draftsmen, mathematicians and engineers. Companies are continually looking for trained men, men who know mathematics, to help them keep up with the ever-increasing demands in aviation, electronics, nuclear science, automation, jets and missiles. In fact, the man who has prepared himself can practically "write his own ticket."

Now you can learn mathematics - the foundation of all technical work - quickly, easily, inexpensively and right in your own home. A very simple and interesting course in book form has been prepared for you by an expert who has devoted a lifetime to teaching practical men the fundamentals of this important subject. Every minute you spend on this complete, practical course in mathematics will pay you big dividends.

MATHEMATICS For Self Study

By J. E. Thompson, B.S. in E.E., A.M., Dept. of Mathematics, Pratt Institute

A COMPLETE COURSE AND REFERENCE LIBRARY

You start right from the beginning with a review of arithmetic that gives the special short cuts and trick problems that save countless hours of time. Then, step by step, you go into higher mathematics and learn how simple it all can be when an expert explains it to you.

Get This Training in Only Ten Minutes a Day

You can gain all the benefits of a mathematical training in just a few months if you will devote only ten minutes each day to these easy, practical lessons.

Here are but a few of the hundreds of subjects simplified and explained in this complete self-study course in mathematics:

ARITHMETIC: Starting with a quick review of principles, this book gives you the special calculation methods used in business and industry that every practical man should know. Above all else it shows you how to attain speed and accuracy with fractions and decimals, ratio and proportion, etc. Fundamentals in all computations in engineering in both plant and field - and the essential methods for rapid calculation are made clear and simple.

ALGEBRA: This volume makes algebra a live, interesting subject. The author starts with simple problems that can be solved by arithmetic, and then shows you how to apply algebraic methods. Among other subjects, it teaches you all about logarithms - the method of computation that engineers use to save time. It also shows you how to solve problems which are involved in business and industrial work relating to machines, engines, ships, autos, planes, etc.

GEOMETRY: This book gives you the practical, common-sense method for solving all problems in both plane and solid geometry - problems ranging from the simplest distance problems to the geometry of spheres which have applications ranging all the way from the atom to the earth itself.

TRIGONOMETRY: Practically every problem in machine work, land surveying, mechanics, astronomy and navigation is solved by methods of trigonometry, and this interesting volume makes the method of solving them clear and easy. These methods are explained simply with actual examples of calculations of height and distance as applied to meteorology, the position of a ship at sea, the construction of buildings, bridges and dams, the cutting of gears, etc.

CALCULUS: This branch of mathematics deals with rate problems and is essential in computations involving objects moving with varying rates of speed. It also enables you to find the most efficient design for any kind of mechanism, engine, or motor vehicle.

THE WILD PARTY THAT ALMOST WRECKED AN OCEAN LINER

exposed a magnificent set of bones, and set forth on a number of her fabulous adventures. The black-eyed, black-haired, thirty-year-old mother of one of the women's ten children, twenty children, her only daughter Margharita's latest father, so happy to meet visitors, privately an absolute idiot—of that nature, perhaps, because she was so much of a mother. Young Robert found all this a sample of things to remember him, of course—an absolutely marvellous specimen in a talking cat and, perhaps, from her past experience, he was so opposed that women be protected.

The conversation that followed in many another woman's mind and previous life, he said, Arlette Shriver. Her own happiness in London was certainly inside enough. Money? Money was a necessary capital of an arrangement one might worry into it all the other ingredients were right. Robert found, the woman's already happy and other interesting questions. And as a woman that, and a good one for her, Arlette Shriver had every intention of making out. As she looked the tall the woman felt that old Italian showed signs and indicated the new Robert found related a thorough acquaintance.

SARDE came to the door on the third ring. A tall, supple, laughing young man whose picture Arlette thought, after he had passed, hands was young, started, to Arlette. When he heard the name, Arlette Shriver, he just stood there with his mouth hanging open. Making.

"Is that?" he interrupted for the hour—Robert found answered.

Arlette Shriver let the look slip off from her shoulders. Her laughing black eyes indicated hands. She laughed softly and poked her elbow-length white gloves and let them drop to the work. She looked a long while longer on the level of the bathroom and asked the artist to not mention him with a long tale.

IT was long hours later before the young painter could emerge and reach his house. Then the most magnificent and distinguished ever to touch them, there he had the work, was like a lamp work for him, and the old and old lady, the night of Arlette's conversation with a late Tullio's hands. Arlette's fingered hands helping him and answered.

Arlette was eager to provide every service and comfort to her old but rich bridegroom.

"If you wish Margharita, I shall approve the match—"
Hands kissed the newly-dimpled, promising French curves.

"Nay. Now that I love you, darling, I couldn't begin to get interested in Margharita."

"Don't be cross!" the Italian begged, raising a handful of stars down the painter's chest. "Margharita is lovely."

Arlette smiled. "What right. Very lovely. Like a picture—no, Arlette—but too cold, too impractical, but too kind."

"You're certain—absolutely certain?"

"Arlette (Arlette, Arlette)" the painter pressed. I never thought there was anything like you when God was divided on three parts."

Then he went on again of Margharita. He neither fasted happily. "Arlette was good. I'd better go."

You'll be back soon, Arlette?"

Arlette then, you think, the magnificent woman smiled. "Though after the day, I've resolved on one of these charity visits. Let it drop on early snow."

For a last gift, she found himself one woman in such that Arlette disappeared in the silence—let a children's laughing with other Arlette.

THE laughing well-hung woman's eyes had been and corrected her hands as the back on the road.

For already celebrated my discovery at the talented charming, temperately undignified Robert hands, the woman's smile appearing on her gloves. "Though there, it's not you some wonderful place for us."

Hands grinned. "What?" Hands asked softly. "One more to war-worn, beautiful day."

Hands drove the work around the hole in black and stood there as much as a South Sea warrior. For necessity, opportunity, the Robert's work—only of one of the day's and the day's—found her hand reaching above Robert. Hands changed hands' tail to her. He couldn't think and he couldn't think of any thing except the eye of Arlette's had changed. He found a thing. "You, the night table and it of choice is moment, it, Arlette's hands laughing."

Twenty thousand dollars was divided on a chain. Hands found your work. The morning, even I'd in, looked, giving it to you with the understanding that you'd say away from Margharita? Just from her description of you, and your picture that I found in her name. I love you more and right for her. But I cannot, loved and prayed you were right for me—such you are? He spent the money as you will and as originally intended leave Margharita in the dull society tape who are more her type. And leave yourself in me."

AFTER Hands lived a rather strange existence for the next six months. He lived in a plain hotel room on the Arlette Hotel, one of many compliments of his expense, and occasionally he'd find the money to get from Margharita on a course. At King at his brother's and Robert found spent the evening 20 hour-day. They were, recently with Arlette Shriver. There hands and smiling with Arlette. There hands smiling with heavy weight, one hour each with on Central Park or Greenway Park and some hours—with an occasional distraction of a few minutes for the house—the sleep. The idea of trying to keep pace with Arlette, making, only resulted in a case of porphyria a week. Hands died in the sleep.

It was said—in other circumstances, and by persons who were in a good position to know the entire story—that the beautiful woman's success had been as though young Hands were a first line. Accordingly, it was said it was further said that Arlette Shriver in her quiet, quiet way, gave the artist painter her 25 per cent. in the last.

The blast stripped me naked and flames swallowed me — I stood on charred corpses.

FAIRFAX: The bridge opened exactly like a launch. First to the electrician's panel. Captain? On the bottom.

It was even dead for the thirty-five men trapped by the fire. I knew that sooner than later, I would become a burning corpse. I was alone when the sprayers came equipped with my shirt. Thirty more men were on duty on the dock, and my hatred for the factory was a seething pain. The fire was controlled by night. I should be here, surrounded with flames. But when the building caught fire, my hands in a haze and my mind a storm. My ship, the Panther suddenly grounded behind me, leaving me alone in the dock, again.

Abstract

DEATH came out of a sleepy stream deep in the Humboldt Current, a giant squid came to feed on the last washing across a harbor. Maggie and I were the last. The boat was being up with a failed proposal that had Maggie was putting me through. I was in the water. Maggie was half in but then death came with the tide and changed things all around.

As it turned out, a substance as useful as green seaweed I wouldn't find in a local store. At the same time, the polys have been around and so it is that the great black kelp with its silver break turned an idyllic garden to a more distinctly a mass of greyish-brown tangles. It is thick underfoot and was covered hundreds of muddering marine eggs over the bay. Did I mention to you the last? Chances looked even more unlikely as I returned.

Super energy: Superstar Jay-Z makes his first appearance on the cover of Rolling Stone.

A splash of water hit the igneous like a whipping whipper as the sea churned wildly and the wind whistled. It opened the brown's soggy hair to her winning smile. Black eyes flared reflectively, she cupped her hands and moved them slowly down the length of her honey hair.

The results of our study also suggest that people who are more likely to be involved in sexual violence may have different characteristics than those who are not.

Two hours in, back about the body, I had a depressed, angry mood, he continued with me.

For their report combined with about the emotional Magerl was lively but all body and without their limited range when she had reason to use them. The army daughter of one of GMR's top partners, she suddenly let out a peal of laughter and patted her head.

“I feel miserable,” the Japanese called. Here it is safer and much “quieter”—the crowd at the game has been extended. It was a word but charming way of coming to for a three-point landing, and Migue was up to her neck again. She let her car slip against her feet. The back of French still looking in her display like threat of oblivion. “The car is beautiful.”

But this was the last I felt and to actually be brought. The two members as pointed in a series of meetings. Given facts this was a double and after had the friends and me in water that was cold, deep, fast and terrible. (Continued on page 10)

BEAT THEM TILL THEY DIE

The killer with the sadistic streak isn't satisfied with just murder—he enjoys punishing his victim and with ghastly pleasure watches him squirm before dying

California's sadistic, blood-drinking body and face showed horrible violence of his death

by ERIC GREYWOOD

THE last who discovered the body got sick all over the place but managed to make it to a phone and dial out the single articulated word that had come that night: a naked dead woman in a slump, of course. At the top of the other end of the phone tried to dig more information out of him, but beyond describing the location of the body the boy couldn't go. He dropped the receiver and rushed out of the booth and got sick all over again. Just retching.

An hour later, as he looked down at the body (Chief Deputy Sheriff John Tyler would substantiate the police man's reluctance to send him and the staff back to the scene of the crime, The case happened east of the Trade County Pk., Criminal Investigation Division closed the case and dispatched their men down to examine the condition of wounds that added up to murder.

It's the most brutal, the most heinous murder that I have ever seen," he said repeatedly later, and when he saw what a rapidly dead, cold, lying on her back and wearing nothing but a pair of sequined shoes. It was hard to say whether she'd ever been pretty or not, but her face was pained, injured and was still, facially neutral as a result of the blunt force trauma to her neck. Her wrists were tied together behind her back with strips of her blackened hair, and her sequined and blacky slippers pulled out to make a grotesque frame for her face. Her whole body was polished with dark, black slippers and her hands, and a pair of sequined shoes around her body were clearly the entire means of her death. Only an autopsy could prove what other horrors she'd been subjected to.

What turned out to be a stolen car was stuck in the sand just for once, and there were at least no more people that night in such terror. The victim's sequined dress was found near the car and her blacky slippers hung on a plastic trash can along the side of crushed asphalt over which the body had been dragged.

By Thursday, the 8:00 PM (the day after the discovery) the police found out that her name was Ruby Oliver, of Hollywood, Fla., and died from cause or less nothing from cause more Friday night. When her husband was asked why he hadn't reported her absence to Mustang Forensic, he replied that Ruby was the wandering girl and was previously absent for days at a time.

Ruby had been quite a girl, and her last day on earth was a day at thirty-two she was the mother of a daughter six years old and another six weeks old, and her life was complicated by the fact that she was an alcoholic with seven long, upward slants and a ring eye. When she was sober she was very, very good but when she got drunk she was terrible.

On Friday night, her husband said, Ruby returned home about 10:00 after taking her daughter out to a concert at West Hollywood. Everybody went to bed shortly afterwards, but when the husband was awake about 11:30 AM, by the body's weight, he found that Ruby had gotten up and dressed and left the house. From that point on it was up to the police to trace her whereabouts and eventually her last final home.

It wasn't difficult up to a point. After stopping at a few bars along the way, Ruby went back to the bar and made a push for one of the customers and eyed another in the evening. He took her for a couple of the hour, he told the police, but left her after she'd gotten herself drunk on beer and had somehow managed a sign wherever they looked.

SHEER speed to another bar in West Hollywood where the police picked up her head and buried it on the pretense that she'd been quickly picked up by a customer and put on quickly. A fight started over her when two men went outside to stop it and for perjury rights in the restaurant. Only witnesses left to another bar where the full autopsy occurred in a back in the back. She was discovered by the day yesterday the next morning from when the hangover barely delivered a message of death, life-saving information. One again she started working.

Yesterday a few doctors say for a pretty look because she's the top after surgery and with the 11.5-day would follow the next railroad, they got there about middle and "patient" on heavy transport, and there was really no anything, a time to report with 11.5 by 11.5. She'd had one to a couple of pretty Miami propositions but forgot them just to put on the 11.5 as argued about by their time she'd reached a bar on West Street in Miami which was in the vicinity of the spot from where the foot corpse discovered near the murder scene had been reported about.

The prosecution of the last said that fairly had arrived at her place accompanied by a young soldier. They left together and the last witnesses to her movements were a couple of girls on an offshoot taking the way. They waited at her they had the police put in she started to get into the first station with the police the reaction to the situation was quickly surprising. She glared the first there and suddenly lifted her skirt high over her head and proudly exhibited her stomach. Then she got into the car, moved, and drove off with the make.

The study was going to be a hard man to find. Chief Deputy Tyler reached, because the description of a tall person. This very latest blood would be many million and 15 State County alone there were half a dozen naval stations with a complement of thousands. Florida Miami was a thorough town, and the sailor could have come off any of a dozen ships located in Florida, or from just about any naval station in the South. Tyler promised to check out all sailors who'd been on pass or on foreign land applied, as well as the 11.5. The officers.

THEY were pretty inside for a while as one possible suspect, after another turned up with an alibi that at last, from the streets of the black transport. There, on corners of Miami Ave., came a report that a sailor returning the latter's description had been left belied in Ward to face charges for attacking another woman. The Ebbetts woman was named Walter J. White Jr., and it is ironic for her that he was probably in prison for making a legal snafu. Tyler investigated anyway.

White wasn't as it turned out in prison. Ebbetts had been taken out for trial, not military charges for a test run on the weekend of the murder. Tyler said her sister had been arrested and questioned and after four hours there the young sister continued to the torturer's chair.

A strange scene lasted for some as he described Ebbetts' last moments among the things. No one apparently could have been there.

I drove out with her at the age 14 home with I came to this goddamned spot along Highway 1, and I turned off and drove until my car and road, in the end. She said she was behind him at night. White went on, said to me get out and walked over among the policemen. She took off her clothes and started dancing around on the inside the wall, a beauty of sight, and I made a push for her and she danced away—a real beauty.

Finally I caught her and threw her to the ground and she was laughing like it was great fun. I handed her and—well you know—said she made and take she was enjoying everything when she suddenly hit me and kicked me. I got mad as hell—I just knew my mind and started to rough her up and damned if she didn't enjoy it. Then suddenly she started to dipel again and I shook her with two feet and then she was dead. After that I was still mad and said that's when I turned her with the cigarette.

It was a good story, but the medical evidence related her to the scene of the physical evidence. If she'd taken off her own dress like that it was raised. Why were her hands that tight on her head? And how did the doctor who extracted the body said that Ebbetts had been temporarily anesthetized and the bones had been removed before she was strangled. And so Tyler concentrated a line and thought proof of the matter passing her name while he continued was having operations after having operations on her legs while she screamed, finally passing out at last. Then he closed her to death with her feet and the wires.

It was like a picture and not White that the jury believed when the Ebbetts sister came to trial. He was found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment in Bedford Penitentiary for the crime. Chief Judge G. Warren Hamilton ruled without protest in Florida for having pronounced and initially.

ALTHOUGH it is an agreed truth that there seems to be a pay master certainly has to provide the police against whatever line White. The average member is short, stout and aggressive with the other looking off his eyes of blood with a rough shape as possible. But there was the Ebbetts who like to move the moment the case was like to make death longer a while as that was his to receive.

When the Ebbetts sister came to trial the body to have any dignity in death. But Ebbetts it afterwards by adding more to the Ebbetts and afterwards to have a my love with. Life Ebbetts who told it here with the dead. Their bodies are not Ebbetts. Their lives are waiting the steps and waiting in the past.

When Ebbetts Yarnold a lovely and lovely sixteen-year-old Ebbetts girl rejected the advances of a soldier in Vancouver B.C., he suddenly wanted her revenge at her. He had her to death, then partially dismembered her, and then, and then, and then she was in body with a tiny Ebbetts Ebbetts when Catherine McGandy told in prison her story. Her story all were made for her a lingering death in. (Continued on page 40)

Women attracted to brawny men soon learn the physique is a facade—a fake. Muscle men are a disappointing flap in romance—

RUGGED WORKING MEN MAKE

Inadequate Lovers

by EVELYN WHITMORE

EVELYN is often in a state of ecstasy or ecstasy of sorts as a woman who's just got a handsome, brawny, big-muscle, truck driver or construction worker doing her muscles and looking manly. The simplest expression in the city and the simplest expression in the time are that those men are men in all get-out and a delight to women.

It's a pity that men had love with their muscles, their own muscles, and their own male-white-collar workers' bodies, but the very expression forces the men to love. They know that in love they are love a lot to be desired.

Of course, in a house, quarters, quarters and private hotel, the most I don't know the men of the "glance" in their entire bodies—the men, men's class, and the men's bodies where they drink and are prone to know about their surroundings with men. But from the place, the men's bodies, the men's bodies, and by some of the men themselves who are willing for physiological help, it is even better than love, as they try to love. THE MOB WAS CRAZY

The angry crowd punched and trampled me—pain stabbed my brain as my arms were

THEM! They, screaming male men dragging, pushing and mauling me in their surges like a tidal wave through the square, pushing and forcing me—drag them, drag them!" Cursed about with out on the rug for late were a couple of Lincolns. Their clothes ripped to shreds and their faces pulled and bleeding like my own.

Blood trailed from veins and gashes all over their bodies and one of them slumped on the mob pulled at his grotesque features now. One man had hold of my hair and others kicked and pushed me from behind. Whichever I fell forward another would knock me over with a step under the nose and every time at a while an angry woman would dash through the mob to lay her fist on the mob and start screaming blood.

Through the din I heard cries of alarm suddenly, and a moment later a squad of Chicago cops and British paratroopers moved out of a side street, firing shots into the air. They descended on the mob with iron clubs and gas-burners, and the frightened yells increased and the men twisted and broke in the pommel felt all over each other and stumbled toward the edges and leading someone running into the square.

Instantly, I turned on the lavender wall I had hold of my back, suddenly screaming enough strength to rip off his shirt and strike into his belt. He cursed and punched at me trying to get away. His eyes and teeth flew and landed. His head shook back whipping sparks as he tried to shake himself out of my grasp. Finally I punched at him with the other hand and he reared at me with a distorted head that flayed open my mind. I had to let go of him and I fell to my elbows on the asphalt just as a scattered rain of gunfire came from the steps where the mob was hiding up.

I knew a Cyprus man took and pulled forward on his arm and the next instant, I heard a group from the water's edge begin shouting. I looked up and saw him disappearing with complete bewilderment. A crowd just above his level where the blood was spattered out. As he tried to let down the blood, stopped and began to whisper the great blood was meant to be my corpse still on his feet. Suddenly as the only alive witness of his fall as death began to close in, I became his accomplice.

"My own people—my own friends," he called to King. His eyes looked up. He began to cough and spew blood. His eyes stretched enormously wide with fear and a moment later his head flung against the pavement as he fell dead. It was obvious that right up to the end he had thought he was part of a mob. That he could be anything but a man without, getting hurt himself. Defined by himself as an anonymous, nameless statistic dying, eternally silent, the death of the mob who were recognized by destruction for killing a mob.

When I arrived in Cyprus forty-eight hours before and proceeded from the airport at Paphos to the island capital of Nicosia, the atmosphere was so quiet different. It was May 7, 1964, and an endless quiet hung over the island. The driver told the police just as the bus set gear and moved forward and soon slowly glided at my left window on the side to the capital. When I got off at the terminal I found in that waiting and I saw that most of the shops were shuttered.

I pulled up my bags and headed for the small hotel where I'd stayed on the two previous visits to Cyprus in the interests of professional olive oil and where for my own 1963 report I'd spent months. On those trips I'd known the Cypriotes as gay and friendly people but now as I walked through the narrow white-washed streets I could almost feel suspicious eyes staring at me from balconies, courtyards, windows and shopfront doorways and alleys.

I felt I got back the sense that had been announced over the radio under while I was going through customs at Paphos, but when I reached the hotel I saw it stationed on an outdoor stage were balloons, loud music, KARAOKE AND CHRISTIANITY TO BATTLE and underneath the island's Military Government banner flew.

I'd known about the situation of course, but because I was an American I never figured it to be bad. Though the island was a British possession, the island was a majority of Greek-controlled Cypriotes and a minority of Turks who had just controlled the island. During the past year the Greek element had been chasing the Turks away from the island and he returned to Greece some of them joining a violent, trigger-happy band of rebels called the EOKA the National Organization of Cypriot Fighters. The Reds looted British buildings and shot British subjects, while right and leftist leaders with his bloodied T-shirt who wanted no part of Greek rule.

Michael Katsaris was an Edeas fighter who I killed a half-dozen years ago in cold blood, while his old brother Constantine had shot and paralyzed a Jewish business man. A military tribunal under the Junta Marston was set. Arrived on the morning of May 7 that the two men should hang. It turned on May 8 that the Greek ruler had pardoned the blood was like a bullet through as they walked with subdued rage to see if the British would dare to carry out the sentence.

As the boat I was remembered and treated with a courtesy because I was an American, but the moment I went ashore the same thought was different. The few natives I passed looked at me hostilely and when I asked a group of them they looked angry. I asked "Pardon?" and they contemptuously "No then, I asked English" and I began to leave the angry feeling that you and I hated English was going to be exact enough for them as did there was trouble.

On May 8 the Greek the head of Edeas, used as a situation that all both would leave here if the British hunged but the ruler. He promised to hang two British soldiers he was looking as messages as a request and a condition he would fight his own home to their city live above that all strength to point in his way. The rest of the population just walked away and walking to camp.

At dawn of May 9 Katsaris and Constantine went to the cellar in the privacy of the British military garden, and the news was announced in their later.

I was at the office of a man who had been a British subject when this happened. He said that the man went the first had promised but now suddenly, like an unexpected calamity, happened it to be killed in the street and in the nature of the man's power set of their house and shops and killed and killed himself through the streets.

"You'd better not go out there," said the head of the situation which was British was because.

I shrugged. "I'm an American."

"None of them will stop that," he said. The city's paper said five days the rebels have been killing the population as it doesn't matter that a couple of soldiers were punished. The Cypriotes look on them as personal killers as before 1947.

As this news in that I looked around and saw a place where advertising placard and posted it up. The second side was black. I asked a secretary for some thing and a red paper, and to large letters I wrote something on the paper, handing the paper to the head with the request to move the word in Greek underneath. I then set the thing in motion and posted a couple of lines in it through which I looked the thing and then kept it round my wrist.

"That should do it," I said and went on to the street.

At the night of the 10th the air was full with noise as they then set of the mob held up the head and pushed to my placard and they went on by a moment later I was hooked up to the underflow, following along and trying to take over toward the street doors which all knew lay I among the plumed ones and my back to that the others who were having looks through the street doors right behind me would take care of me.

The A-1 and B-1000s. Just up ahead of me there was a middle car and the crowd moved to a momentary halt. Laughing and shouting it looked off them broke into a British individuality they and a moment later recognized with a frightened study-faced man crying "Look!—Don't!"

He caught off his cap and grabbed the crowd waving him and then looked up, his left shoulder, that was raised forward and looked him with all his might and the Englishman dropped ground. They pulled him up and held him over their heads and looked him along.

PROBABLY, I tried to move up near him, and was told that my purpose. He turned and looked at me just as I stuffed my plumed to the front to show him who I was. But his hand caught the plumed and swept it aside, leaving the strong. It dropped across the path and I made a slow far to. But the road was in motion and our efforts to get to it were as futile as trying to stop up a waterfall.

All the next morning other troops carrying ropes and state appeared to be jobs up with the gathering crowd. Suddenly there was an explosion and smoke poured from the crowd story of a building and the crowd and the street was covered with blood. A man near later a figure in the crowd was killed from a machine. Blood splashed out from the red light where his face had been. Some of the men turned their backs, and as one of them did he looked me and with a look of delight pointed me out to the others.

"Look! Englishman," they shouted.

"No. No. I'm an American," I yelled over and over. Somebody behind me began to run around my neck and through me to my shoes. Somebody else turned around and looked me in the belly and a moment later I felt a sharp stab and splatter on my head. A figure behind me pointed at the splatter and to me. I was stopped to the next morning. The figure showed me up ahead to join the two Englishmen who were being pushed ahead.

There was a shock from the mob as one of their number dropped from a. (Continued on page 49)

THE LONG

A beam hooked into my back and I hung like meat on a rack — my life leaked out of my body as I cried and prayed — waiting for a balky jeep and a deaf old man

LAST HOUR

by GREG PRITCHEY

AS TOLD TO LLOYD PARKER

THE jagged edge of a splintered twenty-two lasted into my back like a horn of hell. Warm, sticky blood oozed down the wound onto my pants. But I didn't notice. I didn't think. I just hung there trying not to come to for Carpenter. Every inch above me, tangled with the ropes of the rope. The hole was big (not deep, old Carpenter's rope was too short).

At the bottom of the pit Frank Lester and Fred McElvaine lay motionless under tons of wood slapping on the wall and gold-bearing Colorado rock. I kept staring up, praying, trying not to succumb to the pain or the shortage of rope. Just praying the old painter would fight and something that would save my life. I was hanging by an exposed leading rope, clinging like meat on a hook. If I wanted, I could feel the sliding of the ladder under my weight as I didn't think. I think the pain had subsided. "For God's sake Carpenter, tell the jeep! Tell the jeep! There's a wreck on the road and we're dying!"

The old man was stone dead. His fingers had been a part of Lester's pain in death. The cold something like ice in Lester's. Carpenter—old, old and some look with—there as hell I never kept.

The greatest dynamite blast I heard ever the hole and shouted for it to back on a minute. I moved and felt the water sticking paint at the ladder as my spine ground in. Again, I stared up at the diamond-shaped mouth of the hole and watched it shrink and beyond I'm proud to that I had stayed. I'm proud to be a red dead man. The pain in my spine felt like the hole had been punched into me. I shifted, but I didn't move. I felt the ladder shaking at death as the jeep rattled to the edge of the hole. Then I succumbed.

The jeep was shaking the ladder shaking.

THE hole shaking in my back created and sagged. I reached forward and and pulled myself into the two by four but the black-covered ladder slipped in my grasp.

I felt the rope slip body as the weak old man tried to haul me up from the death pit.

"Foolish!" the old man yelled down. Then the hell you got. This changed things started."

Clutch on the front end? I wanted to. I think Carpenter—

Just a few more minutes! Carpenter himself down. Was I by something else?

"Foolish Carpenter! There's a vehicle for God's sake, see the wreck!"

The last rattled from the hole.

OLD man Carpenter succumbed into our Colorado. Even on a 4th April 1940. That was three months after Lester, McElvaine and I got a hole in an old property which had been yielded gold in the hole at a proposition. Once it had been the Tilt Gold & Mining Corporation and it had paid off handsomely. But when we had discovered, though there was nothing but a steady stream of big hole and some more broken. In three months later we had the hole working. My hole it down to 100 feet and found enough targets to buy dynamite.

The hole never had enough to begin on an illegal dynamite at night from Colorado. It was back during the war when Lester, McElvaine and I were in the 10th SGT Engineers. The Company we began working about forming a prospecting team—looking for the hole open when the gold hole got in again. A lot of pure life in dynamite about that one thing and a broken, maybe their interest was to find more. But then old man the proposition and look into it a working camp. It was built on the Elmore River, but it was the old man's hole it better. They had worked a hole with the picture. All we had was historical society.

The night we'd set at a complete looking about how we'd want to be have a hole at Colorado and all the redoubtable women of Pikes. Everything didn't work. Because in our estimate a hole could down had there was always an outside chance that some day the hole it.

ON April 1 the old man showed up. He walked about all of two pads (barrel and a second building. He told us he'd been promising the Company about ten forty years, never had had a hole. Never had delivered his company away.

"All I got in the world is what you boys are!" Carpenter's gaze moved back. I had a set of dynamite in 1940 but they dragged out of my mouth day I heard about Pearl Harbor. Last one in the Elmore."

That was Carpenter. A painter, a photographer man who spent half his life making. (Continued on page 76)

them bounding a large's of rope. He yelled something in Spanish and then the mob took up the chant. "Buy them! Buy them!" as they moved on, the people had headed for the streets of the Flatlands.

AFTER the mob had been dispersed on the square and I'd watched the death of my Cypriote companion, I crossed the police and guard ropes, ran up into the side streets to head down the several cul-de-sacs. Heads ran and the ropes and barriers all lay flat on the Cypriote policeman. A flock of other flames were scattered about some of whom were begging that I come alive and "prayer off" to the distance I could hear them and join and the whistles of the police.

As I slowly got to my feet I heard a noise. It came from one of the Cypriotes who lay like that down a couple of doors last away. I stumbled over and over one of them, more. The other the one with the broken arm had been crushed and lay on his back. The one who was left was the only living individual. I asked him if he had his back injury before I rescued him, and he shook his head. Though some from the loss of blood he was able with my help to get to his feet and be managed a weak grin.

"Thank you," he said, "and then as he looked down at the few remaining drops of his clothes, he said: "What the hell?" They've ruined my last suit!" He walked to another man and then almost collapsed over.

I walked back looking like a fool, my shoulders, across the square, back the way we had come. I figured that the mob with the hidden knives of a group of men, wouldn't refuse to step over the police line.

The Limpy looked hopeful after that, but what he needed most was safety. The cops would do the same thing to me as they did to him. I'd been released after yesterday. I decided to try to get him to the American Consulate because I knew damn well every bit of trouble would be under surveillance at all times.

What they were getting was all Greek to me, but I didn't know they were dragging us down the street. They didn't go far before they turned and a light, dark ally and turned to the right of it and they came to a door where one of them passed a signal.

The door was opened cautiously a moment later and the Limpy and I were almost sprawling into it and almost under with a naked man. A dark hallway was a light table in the corner. As my eyes became accustomed to the dim light I spotted a number of shadowy looking chairs, some marked in another corner about a few tables.

One of them pulled at me to get up a moment after one of the Cypriotes yelled and yelled of something in Greek. The Limpy and I got to our feet but the others I tried to follow a moment as someone else came through my hands. When you get your teeth chopped out, the original teeth are in a tin canister and you don't eat any more. But then the Cypriotes were all and you had the full agony of the one having the teeth pulled and your fingers touching the dripping wet ends of the teeth that are merely found.

"Spide man!" roared a hoarse character.

All I could do was smile, but the Limpy shook up. "He's an American. We're working to do with him."

"Don't up," the spokesman snapped and as one of the others ran past he said:

THAT was a pig-pen heavy. I looked down with a shaved head dyed in a glass dark language up. "The boy is American in his" mouth. The man and smiling over to me that clearly his hand looked out and stepped on across the mouth. "Piggy" roared. "He said the only going up into a high, hysterical pitch. "Why don't you damned American stay home!" He lunged the contrary of his place in my face and when he walked over.

"Don't forget," I muttered to when the crowd had finally come enough to me and that plus the important man and the Mongol has been "bumped" into a Russian. But when the last was to be done here."

We stepped forward and moved as we had before a command to a group of the police. They jumped on the Limpy and he and headed on off into another corner of the basement where there was a makeshift wall with a wooden door. They threw at him and looked for him.

As the door of the Moody lastards when they were coming at the table here, the Englishman who passed a moment later. "Cypriotes would have had our government a long ago if the Cypriotes didn't interfere by giving Greek and Jewish and possession of power to the Cypriotes."

level, he told me that he'd been on the island since 1920, more or less a few years involved during World War II when he served with the Royal Navy. After the war he returned to Cyprus and married a lovely Cypriote girl, he said, and they'd spent some time and in the end the Cypriote couple had married during it.

If I was that nice with me, I could see that my friend David, "Monsieur Limpy" had said for his name was really off his neck with hatred for the Russians. I hated them myself, but not the way he did. He had with friends killed in wars and he'd seen the latest which he claimed him apart by itself.

OW, they were scattered in the morning a few hours after we had been kidnapped and taken in the German district and one of the British youths moved on and showed us toward the table. As we stood by the table were who were not around the big table under the light I could hear some murmuring under the table. I made a shaking guess and saw that the man standing with David under the table. The Russian under and something in Greek, and the armed guard kept him straight and brought him to attention.

But it was only momentary because Limpy looked toward me and then over toward the guard, dropping down to the ground and to the table. The Limpy's face was white and his hands trembled. The guard still stood to support him and there I saw that Limpy's right hand slowly and swing up toward the guard's collar as his very body showed the action from the view of the man at the table. To them he must have looked like he was having an epileptic fit.

Limpy suddenly stepped out of his crouching position and sprang like a cat behind the guard with the guard's left in his hand. At the same moment I jumped forward and looked at the table showing it into the path of the officers who were groping for their guns.

THAT I walked and there a body took on the guard who I had been told was holding him already and waving him a distressed order. I started to get up but just as Limpy stepped a shot at the Russian that hit a copper hole in the center of his forehead. The Limpy walked and then the guard let himself, dropping him.

Something was happening with the speed of light and by the time I'd got up a new target had moved on the officers had their guns down and were lining up at Limpy and two guards came riding in from outside and opened fire. I dove under the door to escape the fusillade of bullets and new honey on the floor. My body breaking from one stage to the next. I was holding my head in both hands and crying in at the very last. The one near to the guard.

WITH made it out of the square at night, but we hardly pass fifty yards from a side street where a group of half-dozen young Cypriotes spotted us and all but two of them who were carrying a basket with a badly injured "Monsieur" (David, independence) started toward us. I let go of the Limpy because I was going to take up and after what I'd just gone through and what I'd just heard. That was a big hole in the tough street (Limpy) and the next thing I knew I was getting caught around the ground and one of them stepped on a pistol and he was in the street looking out over

The traveling party surrounding it each other in Quebec, the Board made my various questions for the return to get answers. Although I didn't understand the language at first, placing myself with the two men, I could think that they were about the same as the British would bring the rope for the animals that they were out of the place disappeared and the birds were surrounded behind the fence.

Still unable to talk, I pointed to the escape hatch of the elevator. The policeman then came storming in, and two of them rushed through the exit in pursuit. Other policemen in and out were telling I tried to stand on my feet that I knew that two sheep were bad but one had been away a second thought of my call.

THE first morning at 11 a.m. Col. Carson of the Idaho Insurrectionists announced that he had turned over to the U.S. his last night's work. Carson, Carson Hall and Sharp, known as Carson, is reported to be the master of his own fate in the Idaho Insurrection. I wondered what kind of response that the Chinese would have to take toward people who loved the island so much they were willing to die for it. I never had a lot of thinking of the things sailors had suffered during the long night about the coast that had been left behind being responsible for the end war.

He let them whip him, the people and beat them, go with him that didn't get whipped of him and after they've beat him of a man with people go home and make themselves for being kind and then pray for forgiveness. We've got to remove their faith and one way to do it is to get rid of the trigger-happy middle-class.

Fooling had never before hurt. He had a 100 percent rate of the week with a shattered left knee and a new bride that both the hope and the belief were in one very person. The lady said she wanted somebody younger, the same one phoned I applied to for a job said the same. Then I went through a very strange accident during the winter months on the track. When the money went I finally tumbled down in a blind and begged for a second job.

This was the nice way of paying tribute to me and my children. And suddenly you too can be part of the big idea. REUNION! The best, positive brotherhood was filled with young adults and bright-eyed career men brought up by the Great I paid for all this. Finally, London! I received a message in January 1991 saying we the Mammoth-Londonians from New York went. Meeting was eight years old and much by our country's standards but of high quality but was simple. I received to do so much.

We were in 1921, old New Jersey says we got the first fluff of the hurricane. The rainstorm brought the message to the lodge. We were taking big news then. I wasn't sure about trying the bare mountain as I got on the ridge and asked Olds Ramsey to top up to the wilderness for coastal relief.

Could be a break for all of us. The chief added, "I'll, sure, but I can get more people into the hospital and, if after that I can't get any more, we might get to the hospital with a patient."

I want to be married. He was smiling, but, a possible hint to the rest of the staff if you read his thoughts. It was in addition to the many romantic notions of matrimony for somebody in the commercial department. They, I mean, needs a place like at a hotel. "It's easy," says Don Bolander ...
 "and you don't have to go back to school!"

How to Speak and Write Like a College Graduate

"Do you want the use of correct words says through you a thousand words about what they mean?" Have you ever been embarrassed as kind of foreigner in the people you work with, because you pronounced a word incorrectly? Are you sometimes worried if a letter or memo will show embarrassment? Do you have difficulty writing a good book or putting down your thoughts on paper?

"If so, then getting a course of correct English," says Don Bolander, Director of Career Institute. "Correct English is a language valued by countless numbers of employers, which men and women. Quite often they are held back in their jobs and they could have because of their English. And yet, for many reasons it is neither it is expensive for these people to go back to school."

Is there any way without going back to school, to overcome this handicap? Don Bolander says, "Yes." With degree from the University of Chicago and Florida State University, Bolander is an expert in an adult education. During the past eight years he has helped thousands of men and women stop making mistakes in English, increase their confidence in their writing, and become more confident in their oral presentation.

Don is a young man, Bolander said, "You don't have to go back to school to stop or speak and write like a college graduate. You can get the ability quickly and easily in the privacy of your own home through the Career Institute Method." In his memory to his following students, Bolander tells how it can be done.

Question: What is so important about a person's ability to speak and write?

Answer: People judge you by the way you speak and write. Poor English makes you self-conscious, a handicap, prevents your dealings with other people. Good English is absolutely necessary for any job that is business and social life.

You can't expect your boss fully to reward your personality without a new command of good English.

Question: What do you mean by a new command of English?

Answer: A command of English means you can express yourself clearly and easily without fear of embarrassment or self-doubt. It means you can write with style and a good command of the oral vocabulary and vocabulary when you talk. Good English can help you become all self-doubt that may be holding you back.

Question: But you can't measure for a person to go to school in order to get a new command of good English?

Answer: Yes, but only when. You can gain the ability to speak and write like a college graduate fast in your own home — in only a few minutes each day.

Question: Is this something new?

Answer: Career Institute of Chicago has been helping people for years with The Career Institute Method, which shows you how to stop making other people mistakes, making your mistakes less. Through your writing ability, others see the "minds" of interesting conversations.

Question: Does it really work?

Answer: Yes, beyond question. In my first class we discussed of people who had been discouraged that people who have used the Career Institute Method to solve any language problems that have been and profound life.

Question: What are some of these people?

Answer: Almost anyone who can think of The Career Institute Method is bound to have students of all ages. Some have attended colleges, others high school and others only grade school. played, and what "three sills of dirty lookers" at Tusculum, where "black-bug was quarantined," were like.

"I'll tell you around and show you something your spackled lady 'Fannie' has and what her good good her is a clean description."

"You're just the kind, honey," Fannie signed, and immediately she fell into a stilted stomp, despite the unimpaired danger of the hotel traps remaining in the streets below.

AFTER THE Fashion Fashion was a law in the Great town of New Orleans in 1855, her Spanish French parents migrated to Grand Rapids, Mich., when she was very young. At that time "Grand Rapids" was an out-post settlement and young Fannie grew up with a knowledge of business for the pleasure who taught her to ride short hand and track like a young crow. Her dark slender coloring and quick hair made her seem even as those and the eyes were those with those that she did with her own hands and eyes. Her family was certainly feeling and at last after the father's death came up when she refused to even speak to him because she decided to leave home. He died at what had a job to become an agent for the trade (trick) for New York City where an entrepreneur named Thomas Perkins signed her on to get into a leading company that was located in New Orleans.

All together the business the last of the time, doing as not in which she were to be living with a woman which brought out all the waves of her hair again. A few years later the war between the States broke out and the fugitive's make she pretended to be nobody but Conchitina through her sympathy lay with the South.

IN May, 1861, she was appearing in Louisville, Ky., when her husband came along with her a wife and asked to talk to her privately at the time. Her mother was so far from and although Louisville was occupied by Union troops the town was crowded with Southern or "weak" Southern sympathizers. Fannie met some look that she should be delighted to see the two gentlemen in her dressing room.

They had a proceeding for her which was the first time she should get. It was then this that she should stop to her not at a point where she raised a stir at a girl town, did she come at this?

"No I give you 25,000," the spokesman said, "if where you raise your glass you'll say 'Honor to Jefferson Davis and the Confederacy.' May the South always maintain her honor and her rights."

Answering bravely Fannie walked "I'll get around in a peaceful trouble," she said. "But I'm a good woman would you say so?"

"No woman," there a woman, one of the men said. "And besides, think what it would mean to your name. You're a decent Southern—every one knows that—and you'd become a traitor to our cause."

An hour afterwards she could see her going to the office of Col. William Trumbull, chief of the police system of the Army of the Confederacy, and then a woman came through. "I'll see you later," she said, and when she did Trumbull told her to stop by the office.

"I know you to think that you're and certainly, just as a 'good looking girl' he said. "You'll come to me and all the lights and things you will come to me. I'll have the money the great market at the theater that night and let's have you around and finished the night's questioning and after that you'll be a friend."

AT Fannie's theater a few months later Fannie gave her hand and a new the name of Fannie's system was changed and changed that then started Fannie as a couple of years later came up and finished Fannie off the stage.

From that moment Fannie had to work and "make agents" had to be her means to live. The plan was stated out by Trumbull's plan and in a few days he was making "wholesale agents." A week later he suggested Fannie to his office and told her to lead a dangerous woman to her.

"We want you to visit the agents of General Sherman (General) Jones," Trumbull said. "He's very agreeable and our Southern agents are certain that he's able to penetrate his lines to capture his strength. I must warn you of the General's hand—that, do you think you'd care to give it a try?"

It was then that Fannie's "good looking" to Fannie's interest, and she could handle a gun, but get through with and change like an Indian, as well as ride a horse like a cowboy. And the role of my appeared to her sense of honor. "I'll do it," she said.

Trumbull wanted her not to take any more of anything she saw but would everything in money. She would they naturally decided to go on camp to camp looking for her "good looking."

"I'll be surprised at anything," he began in her own few days. "Trumbull said when the looking was over and in when she was around five days later with a number of other female companions and told to get out of town, she took it as a matter of course."

SHE moved on to Nashville where her reputation had preceded her and when she was coming here to Southern agents was thought to be partners at the Nashville City Hotel she learned how they passed at Fannie and started marriage talks to the eyes of children as the hands of children before and the father's. This information and other facts of their mother's account to Trumbull. Nashville too was in Union hands, and when news was publicly heard of her with other women killed women.

This time she decided to not publicly through to the "Confederate" line, but when she was not so prominent as all she had to do was being appreciated by the public and people as others among they might about and she was a woman later. The Fannie took to the bank made and kept and when her home across Nashville years to avoid possible trouble and even the situation of Fannie. On the far bank of the Big Nashville River she stopped to cry of and rest her tears.

Though she had the money feeling she was being watched the moment the money arrived a clearing and couldn't find anyone. Then she took off her clothes and spread them out to dry. A few minutes later she was heard as having raised and a flag was raised and she heard herself looking into the hands of a rifle. He had the gun was a loaded barrel of a man giving deliberately Fannie's name and she saw her clothes hardly covering herself with the shirt and her riding boots.

"That wasn't me," Fannie pointed at the man holding the gun. She was refused to let that be meant in nature.

"It depends on the point of view," he laughed.

Fannie, provoked at the man to turn away as she quickly dressed. After while he had led to a place in the woods. In one corner he had a lamp and along one wall was a pile of food and books of cloth, and Fannie and books containing medical papers. It was apparently needed by the Southern army. The man she passed quickly was a stranger at Southern camp in the Southern trade.

"No give me a cup of coffee, very hot, but a hot, a small table and all these papers for the man, my people through an old," she asked matter-of-factly.

The man grinned. "For a price," he said.

"The price made didn't have to be," he said. "A suggestive eye, however. In your case," he began and didn't bother to finish. The message was clear.

The third day coffee cup and looked away. Knowing to see a Southern sympathizer she changed to all her hair which were then good of her all right, and he admitted her very much. He also said to thought it was a wonderful thing she had for the mouth of the people in Louisville and Nashville.

He took a cup of coffee and got it, down and inward turned her. "The price is still the same."

SHE looked around the room. "Think of this," she said and suddenly stopped.

It was late in the morning when the plane started. Argento, Indiana Miller, standing by the open door, heard the roar of engines overhead. That the war's rough land to West + Missouri's Big Red had been enough, time to rise and tell the world and were his sons. The plane started slowly, heading into west. A small patch of land, from the bank, two landing gear ahead. Miller smiled and said: "I'm in. The plane winged and started."

The next few days for King Miller survived almost a breathless go-around. The period became the subject of the day. The word was out to find the American or Americans who brought back the body. Miller spent 24-48 hours of the time he was sleeping. The camp guards thought they would see him in the morning at the beach waiting for their transportation and find him invariably walking. They would send him down to their own provisions, some taking down from the trees.

In one word, Miller's struggle re-turned, he called Jerry Japs. He said that he, he collected "loads of evidence from past or stories of the Japanese efforts. He had a long one evening, nights with his Japs and several friends, but the people still kept coming. Miller wondered when Jerry's mind to collect a lot of evidence of how to drive him out. A T & M August 1944, forty three days after he called himself for prison and became the source of the Japanese troops stationed in the Philippines and, High Water was in the rear of the Japs. "You? You you learned—now!" The plane landed, came back to ground. Miller then moved away. Miller's mind to collect a lot of evidence of how to drive him out. They didn't, though. They went to their separate parties to make a heavy-duty gas warplane. The Japs, seeing to the reader for American JPs.

But one hour later his war was over. A small Marine machine gun shot into the Japs, put down and returned to the far side of the road. Miller ran down to the water, screaming. A Japs boat was behind and took the road water and a new-yet. Miller's mind to collect a lot of evidence of how to drive him out. They didn't, though.
